Total returns are calculated using the sell (exit) price, net of management fees and gross of tax as if distributions of income have been reinvested at the actual distribution reinvestment price. The actual returns received by an investor will depend on the timing, buy and exit prices of individual transactions. Return of capital and the performance of your investment in the fund are not guaranteed. Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance. Figures showing a period of less than one year have not been adjusted to show an annual total return. Figures for periods of greater than one year are on a per annum compound basis. The current benchmark may not have been the benchmark over all periods shown in the above chart and tables. The calculation of the benchmark performance links the performance of previous benchmarks and the current benchmark over the relevant time periods.

Commentary

The Australian Ethical Fixed Interest Fund performed in line with the benchmark index before fees over the December quarter, however fell -0.2% after fees against the -0.10% return of the Bloomberg Ausbond Composite Bond Index.

Australian long-end yields closed the quarter slightly higher, dragging performance of fixed income markets down in the face of continued Central Bank easing. Even as the RBA moved to provide near-term support by cutting the cash rate and 3-year Yield Curve Control target from 0.25% to 0.10% in November, other uncertainties were lifting from markets, with positive COVID-19 vaccine news, the removal of the US election outcome as a source of uncertainty, and improving domestic economic data (in particular, better-than-expected unemployment outcomes).

Moves in yields were felt most acutely in the liquid Government bonds, which comprise half the market and have the longest duration, falling 0.57% and detracting 0.30% from the fund vs 0.32% from the index. Other fixed income assets benefited from shorter durations and tightening credit spreads, mitigating the impact.

The Fixed Interest Fund retained its neutral duration position throughout the quarter.
