Total returns are calculated using the sell (exit) price, net of management fees and gross of tax as if distributions of income have been reinvested at the actual distribution reinvestment price. The actual returns received by an investor will depend on the timing, buy and exit prices of individual transactions. Return of capital and the performance of your investment in the fund are not guaranteed. Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance. Figures showing a period of less than one year have not been adjusted to show an annual total return. Figures for periods of greater than one year are on a per annum compound basis. The current benchmark may not have been the benchmark over all periods shown in the above chart and tables. The calculation of the benchmark performance links the performance of previous benchmarks and the current benchmark over the relevant time periods.

Commentary

The market continues to be volatile – COVID is still an evolving virus that could continue to spark widespread lockdowns, as evidenced by recent actions to lock down significant portions of the population in China; Russia's invasion of the Ukraine increases the probability of recently unfathomable tail risks such as nuclear war and the inflation and interest rate regime that has become entrenched over 30 years may be at a tipping point. Again this quarter, the market measure of "fear", the VIX index, has traded through a wide range with each headline– starting the year at relatively benign reading of 16, before peaking at 35 at the start of March following the commencement of hostilities in the Ukraine and then receding back to recent average of 20.

The International Shares Fund depreciated -9.5% over the March quarter versus its benchmark (MSCI ex Australia) which decreased -8.4%, resulting in underperformance of -1%.

The sectors which detracted from performance were Industrials, Information Technology and Energy. The Fund is overweight IT and Industrials which underperformed due to rising interest rates, supply chain issues and the impact of the Ukraine war. The Fund has no holding in the Energy sector which benefited from the substantial increase in oil prices.

The sectors positively contributing to the Fund's performance were Consumer Discretionary and Consumer Staples, sectors where the Fund has significant underweight positions. Consumer Discretionary declined as glamour stock Amazon underperformed and Consumer Staples did likewise due to rising costs caused by the global pandemic and the Ukraine war.
