Total returns are calculated using the sell (exit) price, net of management fees and gross of tax as if distributions of income have been reinvested at the actual distribution reinvestment price. The actual returns received by an investor will depend on the timing, buy and exit prices of individual transactions. Return of capital and the performance of your investment in the fund are not guaranteed. Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance. Figures showing a period of less than one year have not been adjusted to show an annual total return. Figures for periods of greater than one year are on a per annum compound basis. The current benchmark may not have been the benchmark over all periods shown in the above chart and tables. The calculation of the benchmark performance links the performance of previous benchmarks and the current benchmark over the relevant time periods.

Commentary

Global equity markets delivered another strong quarter, with the MSCI World Ex Australia Index rising 6.1%, outperforming the ASX300 (+5.0%). US equities led gains, supported by resilient earnings, robust consumer demand, and accelerating AI adoption. Despite persistent geopolitical and economic headwinds, investor sentiment remained constructive, buoyed by expectations of rate cuts and deregulation.

The defining feature of the quarter was the remarkable calm in markets. Volatility remained low even as uncertainty around inflation, economic growth, and geopolitical tensions—including potential government shutdowns—grew. Equity performance appeared driven by a singular expectation: that the Federal Reserve would begin easing rates, regardless of whether inflation had been fully subdued. This narrative supported strength across global developed markets.

Momentum factors continued to dominate market leadership. AI-related stocks, now comprising over 40% of the S&P 500's market cap, were key contributors to both performance and risk. However, elevated valuations and crowding in high-beta names prompted caution. Under the surface, sector and factor rotations, along with low asset correlations, created pockets of volatility.

The International Shares Fund (Retail) (the "Fund") returned 5.0% net of fees over the quarter. At a sector level, stock selection in Information Technology and Financials negatively impacted relative performance, while our underweight exposure to Consumer Staples and our overweight exposure to Communication Services assisted performance. The performance of the "Magnificent 7" was mixed with Alphabet, Apple, NVIDIA and Tesla (not held) outperforming the benchmark, while Meta, Microsoft and Amazon (not held) posted below-benchmark returns. Alphabet's share price rose 14% in September alone, and over 35% for the quarter overall, marking its best quarterly performance since 2005. The company's share price surged due to strong earnings growth, momentum in AI products like Gemini, a favorable antitrust ruling, and increased investor returns through dividends and buybacks.
