Total returns are calculated using the sell (exit) price, net of management fees and gross of tax as if distributions of income have been reinvested at the actual distribution reinvestment price. The actual returns received by an investor will depend on the timing, buy and exit prices of individual transactions. Return of capital and the performance of your investment in the fund are not guaranteed. Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance. Figures showing a period of less than one year have not been adjusted to show an annual total return. Figures for periods of greater than one year are on a per annum compound basis. The current benchmark may not have been the benchmark over all periods shown in the above chart and tables. The calculation of the benchmark performance links the performance of previous benchmarks and the current benchmark over the relevant time periods.

Commentary

2025 began with expectations central banks in major economies would be cutting rates, as post covid inflation surges receded and policy no longer needed to be restrictive. The RBA began cutting early, with the first of three moves in February. The Australian 3-year bond rate fell 60 basis points (bps) across the first half of the year in anticipation of an ongoing easing cycle. Longer bonds, impacted by uncertain trade policy, had a less pronounced rally in the first part of the year, with the Australian 10-year bond trading between 4.1-4.4%.

In the US, the Federal Market Open Committee was hesitant to cut rates early in the year, balancing their dual mandate of controlling inflation and maintaining maximum employment, as tariff policies were expected to put upward pressure on inflation, even as employment began to ease in the latter part of the year.

In the December quarter, Australian inflation outcomes once again moved above the RBA's target band and the prospect of further rate cuts gave way to the market pricing for rate hikes. Both 3 year and 10-year rates reversed course and finished the year higher than they started at 4.13% & 4.74% respectively. As a result of the move higher in yields, the composite bond index fell 1.15% in the December Quarter, blunting an otherwise positive year for fixed income, with the index up 3.13% for the year.

Credit tightened across 2025, led by the major banks, with spreads coming in 10bps over the year, with a short-lived widening in April after the announcement of significant tariffs in the US. This was despite some of the uncertainties from the headline news, with credit fundamentals supported by cash rate reductions both domestically and in the US over the year, as well as only gradual moves higher in unemployment from near full employment levels, and low mortgage arrears rates. BBB-rated industrials tightened 20bps on average. The Bloomberg Ausbond Credit Index 0+ outperformed the broader Bloomberg Ausbond Composite Bond Index 0+ in three of the four quarters of the year, outperforming by 1.1% over the year, up 4.27%. The portfolios held overweight credit positions going into 2025. We have continued to hold these positions in 2025 and expect to maintain these in the first quarter of 2026. The portfolios have benefitted from the resulting spread compression over the year.
