What types of information do we collect and why?

Australian Ethical collects personal information from you when you enter one of our promotions or respond to one of our communication or research initiatives. The personal information that Australian Ethical collects from you may include your name and contact details, including your email address.

We may collect additional personal information from you by other means from time to time with your consent.

The primary purpose for collecting your information is to conduct marketing promotions or communication initiatives and may include, amongst other things competitions, giveaways, voting, newsletters subscriptions, social media offers, petitions or market research. We may, for an indefinite period, unless otherwise advised by you, use the personal information you have provided for promotional, marketing, publicity, research and profiling purposes and to send electronic messages or telephone you, as well as developing products and meeting regulatory obligations.

If you choose not to provide the personal information that we ask for, or the information that you provide to us is incomplete or inaccurate, it may mean that we cannot contact you to notify you if you have won the competition or if there have been any updates with respect to the relevant promotion or initiative. If the prize notification email is returned as undeliverable or the winner does not respond within 7 days of notification, the prize will be deemed unclaimed and will be re-drawn.

You can always opt-out from receiving marketing communications from us by clicking on the ‘unsubscribe’ link in the email we send to you or by calling us.
